Local P. T. A. Heads Tubercular Seal Sale Drive Here

At Meeting Thursday
Plans for Intensive Drive

BARLOW HEADS SALE

Will Direct Activities of
P. T. A. Group In Stamp Drive

The four P. T. A. bodies in this city, co-operating with similar groups throughout the county, will sponsor the Tubercular Seal sale this year, the drive under direction of John Barlow, local hotel man, under plans formulated at a meeting of representatives of the various P. T. A. groups held in the Barlow hotel here Thursday afternoon.

Bert Keith, head of Junior Hi P. A., Mrs. Rorsey McKee, of Senior Hi, Mrs. P. H. Webb, of Brookwood, with Mrs. O. A. Graves, president of the city P. T. A. council, had been designated to formulate plans for the drive. Miss Beryl Henry, supervisor of schools, presided at the gathering.

$1,000 Is County Quota
To Hempstead county falls the pleasant duty of raising $1,000 for this fund, and the plan adopted contemplates the sale of bonds to business men of the county. Each bond purchased will be accompanied by a like amount in stamps. Denominations of bonds are fixed at $5, $10 and $15. In addition, individual members of the P. T. A. throughout the county are charged with the duty of selling stamps or adding the merchants who purchases in the sale.

Barlow Heads Drive
John Barlow, popular local hotel man, was named chairman of the campaign in this county, working in co-operation with the P. T. A. groups and under whose direction it is confidently expected the drive will reach the quota assigned.

Miss Henry announced the seal sale would start Friday the day after Thanksgiving, and that the list of those in the county buying bonds and aiding in this worthy effort, will be submitted to the local newspaper for publication.

The Wednesday following Thanksgiving was designated at date for the next meeting, 2:30 in the afternoon, and the Barlow hotel being the time and place.

Members Enthusiastic
Each member of the P. T. A. group present was apparently enthused over this broadening of their opportunity to be of service and pledged for each of their organizations loyal support to the drive chairman.

South Feels Grip of Wintry Blasts

Premature Winter Hits In Southland, Apparently for Stay

(By the Associated Press)
Weeks in advance of even usual wintery frosts, many sections of the south were today blanketed in snow, which was still falling and was the indirect cause of one death.

Arkansas, Tennessee, Nebraska, Kentucky and western North Carolina were blanketed today, while elsewhere temperatures sagged and predictions were for snow in North Carolina and other sections in North Carolina and Virginia tonight or Saturday morning.

Ethics Must Guide Marketing of Oil

Head of Petroleum Institute Says Ethics Guiding Principle.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP)—President E. B. Reeser of the American Petroleum Institute, when he announced the institute's new code of marketing rules, said "the guiding principle of every marketing operation is an ethical one."

He said that one cause of overproduction in the oil industry was too "individualistic" competition. "I believe," he said, "that most of our marketing evils may be traced directly, first, to permitting our manufacturing operations to dominate our position, and secondly, having overproduced our product, to permitting unchecked the use of double-barreled, double-distilled, super-salesmanship methods to try to get rid of the surplus product."

Snow, Cold Winters, Razorback Hogs, Poor Crops and Everything Discussed

The blanket of snow covering the earth this morning set old times talking, first on the depth of the fall how long since there had been any like it—and then a variety of other things, with nothing but politics and religion barred. You see, it was a friendly gathering.

Ed Van Sickle opined the snow was four inches deep, in which opinion he was concurred. "Bill" Brummett declared it was not two inches; Chief Baker declared it was knee deep to a guinea hen; Jim Bearden found it two feet deep on top of his car early this morning and some other fellow wise-cracked it was belly deep to a tall puppy.

Later, Judge Bright started talking about snows, past, present and future.

HOT SPRINGS, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Fort Smith was selected as the 1930 Arkansas Baptist convention city at the closing session of the annual convention today.

The next convention will hold its opening session in the border city Tuesday night, November 18, in the First Baptist church of that city.

Well Known Hope Woman Is Killed

Lived Here Years Ago and Had Visited Relatives Here Often.

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 22.—(AP)—His vision apparently affected by a heavy fall of snow, the first of the season, a negro chauffeur Thursday drove an automobile into the side of a railroad motor car on the outskirts of Dallas, killing five women passengers and seriously injuring himself.

After much difficulty, four of the victims were positively identified as Mrs. Charles Clark, 42; Mrs. A. P. Grider, 41; and Mrs. G. R. Grider, 65; Mrs. H. S. Pendergoss, 65, all of Leonard, and Mrs. Doly King, 39, of Fort Worth.

The women left Leonard early Thursday for Fort Worth, where they were to have attended a luncheon given by Mrs. Hubb Digges.

The accident occurred about five miles east of Dallas, the automobile apparently skidding on slippery pavement into the motor car, bound from Dallas to Paris. The motor car belonged to the Santa Fe railway company.

The automobile was dragged through a cattle guard and demolished. All of the victims were mutilated save the chauffeur.

All of the women were of prominent Fort Worth and Leonard families.

Mrs. Pendergoss was well known in this city, being a sister of Mrs. Dallas McClendon and having many other relatives here. She visited here a few years since, her visit being the occasion of a gathering of many of the older residents of this section.

No announcement has been made to date of funeral arrangements, though all relatives here expect to attend.

State Witnesses To Give Tunney Needed Evidence

Say Collusion Between Mrs. Fogarty and Former Husband.

TO "WORK COURTS"

Claim Abundant Testimony To Show Suits Are Only Frame-Up.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Frank Pace, Little Rock attorney representing Gen. Tunney in the $300,000 breach of promise suit brought by Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty, said today that Tunney's counsel would be able to show through depositions taken here and elsewhere that Mrs. Fogarty and her former husband, John Fogarty, were in collusion to extort large sums of money from Tunney "through intricate and manipulation of court machinery."

"We have an abundance of testimony which indicates collusion to extort money from Tunney," Pace said. "Every deposition taken shows the Fogarty's to be partners in a gigantic scheme to defraud Tunney out of a half million dollars."

Pace and attorneys for Mrs. Fogarty have been three days taking depositions; the testimony to be used in trial of the suit.

Mrs. Fogarty's former husband has also used Tunney charging alienation of his wife's affections.

Workmen Fail To Death In Chimney

Wife's Inquiries Leads To Discovery of Bodies Day After

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Three workmen, cleaning the interior of a huge smokestack in Brooklyn fell to their deaths yesterday, and their fate was not known until this morning.

The anxious inquiries of the wife of one of the victims, worried because of her husband's absence, led to the discovery of the bodies.

The men were scraping the inside of the 160 foot chimney of the American Sugar Refining Co., clearing it of the accumulation of grime. Their scaffolding collapsed from the 75 foot level, but the noise of the accident was drowned out by the wailing of machinery in the plant and the roar of traffic over Brooklyn bridge.

William Clark's body was immediately identified as one of the victims, his brother, Arthur, of Westbury, N. J., being identified later. The third victim has not been identified.

Clemenceau Nears End of Long Fight

"Tiger of France" Will Lose Last Fight Friends Say

PARIS, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Friends of former Premier Clemenceau this afternoon said that his condition was extremely critical and that a fatal issue was possible at any time.

The intense suffering of the 88-year-old statesman have been intense and may have direful consequences.

Even injections of morphine gave him no relief from the pain caused by intestinal disorders and only the injection of camphorated oil kept his heart going.

"Is there any hope?" his physician was asked, to which he replied; "I do not know."

Death of Kentuckian Recalls Famous Sheep-Cattle Wars of the Frontier West

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 22.—(AP)—The bloody days of the west, when sheepmen invaded the domain that cattlemen considered their heritage, is fiction in this generation.

To Kels P. Nickell, who died in Jackson, Ky., recently, it was a page from his book of life.

A blacksmith who saw in sheep a potential fortune, Nickell turned to raising them in the Iron country of Wyoming where none had contested the cattlemen's rule of the range.

Hardened by many years in the west, Nickell stubbornly fought for his life and the right to place on the range for his 3,000 head of sheep.

The story of that fight is a saga of the west.

He was shot from ambush and severely wounded. He was marked for death by Tom Horn, professional man killer, and became involved in a feud with a cattlemen who was Horn's intimate. The cattlemen, armed with knife wounds.

Nickell's 16-year-old son, Willie, was ambushed near his father's ranch. He was wearing his father's coat and was beside Nickell's horse when he was shot to death, apparently mistaking him for his father.

Then began a relentless man hunt for Horn, who was captured six months later. At his trial in Cheyenne, the prosecution offered a "confession," damaging statements which were gained through a ruse.

Posing as a "bad man" Joe LeFors, deputy United States marshal, inveigled Horn into a drinking bout. His tongue loosened by drink, Horn made statements which were copied by a court reporter concealed in an adjoining room. The "confession" with circumstantial evidence, convicted him.

He was sentenced to be hanged after a 14-day trial. There followed months of long delays during which the desperate man sought to foil justice. Once he escaped with another prisoner after clabbing an undersheriff, but was recaptured.

A plot to liberate him by dynamiting the jail was exposed by a prisoner to whom Horn entrusted messages. The prisoner turned them over to Horn's friends but to a Cheyenne newspaper, which scored the biggest scoop in the journalistic history of the state.

Protesting his innocence to the end, Horn died coolly on the gallows, and it was the comment of the period that not until he dropped through the trap did prominent cattlemen breathe easily.

Youth, Short of Funds and Clothes, Commits Suicide

University Missouri Student Ends Life By Stabbing Self In Heart.

FUNDS WERE ON WAY

Youth Was Graduate of Faragould High and Athletic Star.

PARAGOULD, Ark., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Funds which he had so pathetically asked in letters written to relatives were en route at the moment Edwin A. Garrett, 20-year-old freshman at the University of Missouri, his father, James E. Garrett, said today.

In letters the youth had said he was despondent over falling grades, being without funds and sufficient clothing now that winter was coming on.

Mr. Garrett, who arrived from Little Rock last night, did not tell the boy's mother that the youth took his own life, but simply that the boy was dead. The mother was heart-broken.

"It is the worst blow I have received in many years," Mr. Garrett said. He said he had sent the boy funds during the week but apparently the letter had not been received when during Wednesday night, according to University physicians, the youth stabbed himself through the heart with a pair of scissors.

The body was found at noon yesterday.

The youth had graduated from Paragould high school last year, where he was one of the school's star football players. The body will arrive here Saturday. Burial will be either Saturday or Sunday.

Giant Turbine Is Real Fuel Saver

Double-Deck Steam Turbine Cuts Coal Bills In Half.

SCHENECTADY, Nov. 22.—(AP)—A new type of double-decked steam turbine generator, requiring 50 per cent less coal than others, has been perfected by the General Electric company. It is rated at 110,000 kilowatts.

Steam is passed into the upper turbine at 1,200 pounds pressure. After producing 55,000 kilowatts the steam flows to re-heaters. From there it passes into the low-pressure turbine below and produces another 55,000 kilowatts.

The Ford Motor company plant at Dearborn, where one of the turbines is being installed, must build a tunnel three and a half miles long and 15 feet wide to the River Rouge, in order to obtain the 600,000,000 gallons of water daily necessary to keep the machinery cool.

He used two brooder houses with a sun porch on each, elevated about two and one-half feet from the ground, screen enclosed and equipped with a wire bottom.

At the end of four months 285 pullets were placed in the laying house and when they were six months old Golder was getting better than 50 per cent production.

Champ Hen's Eggs To 315 for Year

Greatest Output In Seventh International Contest.

EAST LANSING, Mich., Nov. 22.—(AP)—H. A. Keister, Bangor, Mich., poultryman, has some industrious hens.

One hen has completed a year's record of 315 eggs for the greatest individual output in the seventh international egg-laying contest sponsored by Michigan State college.

A. J. O'Donovan's pen of white leghorns from Katanah, N. Y., walked off with the contest by scoring 2,538 points and laying 2,424 eggs. The pen of L. F. Heasley, Dorr, Mich., produced 2,676 eggs but gained only 2,492 points. Two-ounce eggs were graded on the basis of one point.

The average egg production during the contest was 204.86 eggs, compared with 197.7 for the previous high in 1927. One hundred pens of ten birds each were entered in the contest.

Grange Head Sees Community Danger

Market in Progress Is Danger Threat By Dividing Communities.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Agriculture faces the danger of farm communities being divided against themselves, L. T. Tabor, master of the National Grange, declared in a warning to the Seattle convention.

"The progress made in cooperative marketing, and the assistance of the government and other agencies in developing commodity organizations, threaten disaster to rural community life by dividing communities along commodity lines," he said.

"When community life and welfare are lost sight of and a neighborhood is thought of in terms of its various commodities, discord will develop and unified agriculture will become impossible."

While the Grange believes every farmer should support commodity co-operatives, Tabor insisted that the welfare of agriculture depends upon maintaining general community organizations with their social, educational, fraternal and legislative features and "their background developing the best in morals, patriotism, and spiritual life in the open country."

"The farmer must perform for himself most of the tasks that affect his own welfare," he said. "He must meet organization with organization. He must meet centralized buying with the strong arm of collective bargaining."

Governor Parnell and the Press

ACCORDING to Associated Press dispatches, Governor Harvey Parnell, in addressing the Arkansas Education association at Little Rock last Saturday attacked "certain interests," which he charged were "subsidizing the press of the state," and fighting to repeal the Hall income tax act.

This charge is unworthy of Governor Parnell, and will be resented, as it should be resented, by the newspapermen of Arkansas. No one who reads the newspapers of Arkansas, or who has a reasonably wide acquaintance with them, will believe for a single instant that there is the slightest basis of truth in the governor's charge. Charging newspapers which do not happen to agree with them with being subsidized is an old dodge of the demagogic politician and office-holder, and carries but little if any weight with the average citizen.

A newspaper or a newspaperman who will be subsidized is a crook, and our wide acquaintance among newspapermen of the state leads us to sincerely believe that there is not the slightest justification for Governor Parnell's charge, nor one scintilla of evidence which can be adduced to substantiate it.

Governor Parnell should, in all fairness, either present evidence in substantiation of his charge, or withdraw it in as public and as emphatic a manner as he made it. Self-respecting newspapers in the state should demand this, and should be satisfied with no less.

Let's Press Forward

DOZENS of influential citizens from all sections of the county have expressed disappointment over the failure of the Board of Supervisors to employ a county agricultural agent for next year.

The resignation of Mr. T. E. Douglas becomes effective December 31, and Clay county will be without an agricultural agent after that date, unless the Board of Supervisors should reconsider its recent decision and decide to employ another man.

Clay county has made splendid agricultural progress during the past few years. The revival has been especially active since the location of the Swift milk and poultry production plant in West Point, and the Times-Leader believes it will be a serious mistake to abandon this work at this time.

The Federal government and the State Extension Department stand ready to pay into the Clay county treasury $1,000 a year for the employment of a county agent, and we believe the Board of Supervisors should be urged to appropriate enough additional money to secure for the county the best agricultural agent it is possible to secure—a man well versed in all of the essentials of successful dairy and poultry production—and that he should be placed on the job as soon after the first of the year as possible.

We are offering no criticism of the Board of Supervisors. Those members who voted against the appropriation are doubtless of the opinion that they are voicing the sentiments of their constituents. But no thoughtful citizen wants to see Clay county go backward, and this abandonment of the work of the county agent will unquestionably be regarded as a backward step.

Diversified agriculture is bringing prosperity to this section, and now that we have here in West Point an industry that will provide a cash market for dairy and poultry products at all seasons of the year, it is especially desirable that we do everything possible to increase production in these lines.

The right sort of a county agent will prove a good investment, and we should not hesitate to spend the money necessary to secure the services of a capable man, who can lead and direct the agricultural development of the county.—West Point (Miss.) Times-Leader.

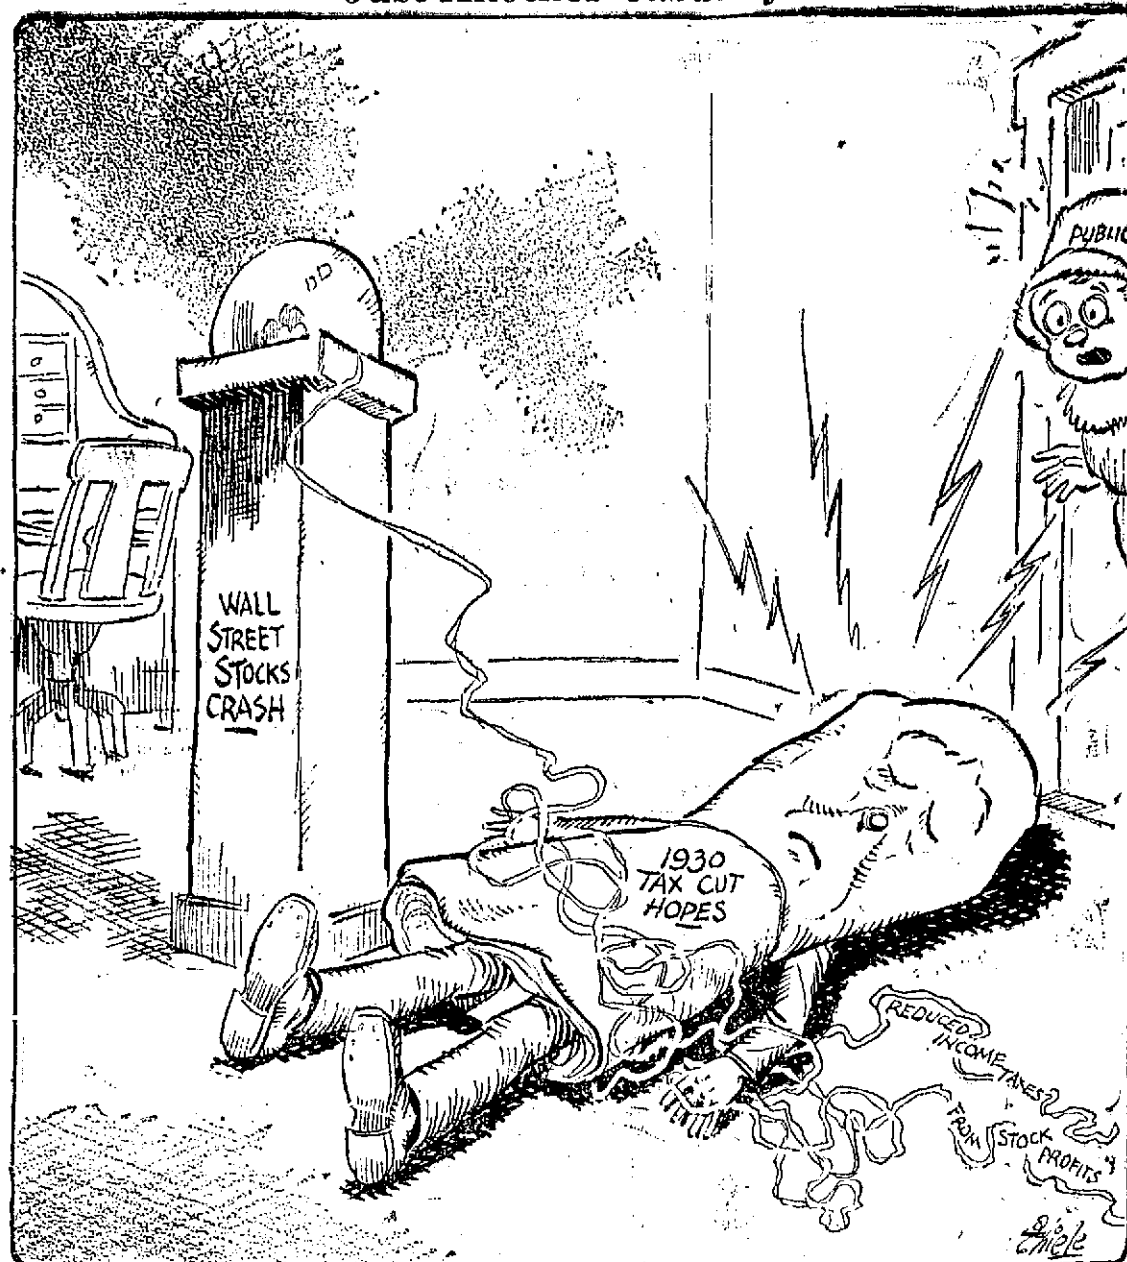

Nothing New

IT is doubtful if Senator Brookhart accomplished anything very important by his speech about the "Wall Street dinner" at which liquor was served in the presence of United States senators.

The trouble wasn't that Senator Brookhart told too much. He didn't tell enough. There was nothing particularly new or startling in what he said. It was hardly worth the effort and sensation involved.

Someone could do a real service by exposing some of our dry-voting, wet-drinking law-makers. But that job still remains to be done. Senator Brookhart didn't even come close.

Just Another Casualty!

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Either this is the funniest place in the world or else things that have been going on here are all very sad and ought to be deplored by right thinking citizens. No doubt some of our noblest American institutions would be undermined if a certain proportion of the workers did not always insist on taking Washington seriously.

To some of us who have not lived here too long it's a question whether this ought to be called the national capital or the national bughouse.

There is material for a series of 70 or 80 articles on this theme, but your correspondent will try to confine it to one.

The Senatorial Cut-Ups

One can pass over such deliberate wit as the spectacle of Senator Norris and his friends picking up the musical instruments and pretending to give a concert on the Senate floor, or somebody's bright idea of planting a big green bottle on Senator Brookhart's desk and of another senator's trick of putting a cocktail shaker in another senator's desk drawer. The real laughs here are derived from things funny but not meant to be funny.

Last fall we were all being urged to imagine Mrs. Smith in the White House. Yet more absurdities have occurred in the Washington social racket these last few months than were ever noted while the Smiths ruled the executive mansion in Albany. Where else in the world could the question of where Mrs. and Mr. Gann were to sit at dinner have become such a burning national issue, stirring up Congress, the State Department and the White House. Now on top of that unsettled problem has come the Hiram Johnson incident.

The facts, briefly, were: Senator Johnson was conspicuously left off the list of guests for a White House dinner for Ambassador Dawes to which all other Foreign Relations committeemen were invited. Newspapermen gave the White House plenty of time to correct it by calling attention to the omission but, according to them, a spokesman for the president said: "I don't know anything about it." Other senators including Borah and LaFollette, talked loudly of the supposed snub to Johnson during the dinner. Morning newspaper stories agreed in front-page stories that this was Hoover's naive method of rebuking Johnson for his irregularity.

The whole Senate buzzed. Senator Dave Reed dashed to the White House and urged the need of an explanation. Mr. Hoover wrote Johnson that there had been a mistake. Everyone agreed with that, but a thorough canvass reveals no one who thinks it was accidental. Either the president, realizing his error, established a diplomatic alibi or everyone else in town is crazy. Washington insists on believing the worst.

Then look at Senator Brookhart, who is getting eight-column headlines with his story of the one booze party he attended in 1925. Everyone knows that whenever two or more politicians get together in Washington something is likely to be poured and there have been a thousand bigger and wetter parties since the one Brookhart attended. The only thing to match that one is Senator Howell's recent discovery that Washington was wet and President Hoover's challenge of the statement.

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM
The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me: Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

The creature of thought scarce likes to tread

With wintry wreaths the forest is bound,
And the hills are with glittering diamonds crowned;
'Tis the fairest scene we can have below,
Sing, welcome then, to the drifting snow.

The Avenging Parrot

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Mrs. Emma Hogarth, miser, said to keep money in her room on the second floor of Mrs. Rhodes' boarding house, is strangled to death. Bonnie Dundee, "cub" detective, assists Lieut. Strawn in the investigation.

Suspicion at once falls on Emil Sevier, former boarder, whom Mrs. Hogarth accused of trying to rob her and who has left town hurriedly. Cora Barker, theatre pianist, also a boarder, is arrested as a material witness against Sevier when she confesses she was in the murder room shortly after midnight.

Other boarders under suspicion are Henry Dowl, Mr. and Mrs. Sharp, Norma Dowl, Walter Styles, a financially insecure business man who had quarreled with Mrs. Hogarth; Bert Magnus, newcomer, amateur scenario writer, who is heard typing in his room until 12:15, and Daisy Shepherd.

All boarders agree to stay on except Daisy, who leaves. Dundee pays Styles a visit and finds him washing socks and a pair of gloves. Magnus, obviously in love with Cora, worries about her arrest. Dundee attaches significance to the utterance "Bad Penny" made by Cora, the victim's parrot, when he finds in her diary reference to a "D." of whom she lived and read. The postman, Mrs. Hogarth's only confidant, says that the victim's monthly letter came from a Sally Graves in New York. Dundee recalls details of the mysterious murder of Sally Graves in New York a month previously, and concludes Sally was Mrs. Hogarth's daughter and that "D." committed both murders. But who and where is "D."?

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Chapter XXV
"Aha! This looks promising!" Dundee exclaimed triumphantly as he bent over the trunk which held all of Mrs. Strawn's possessions. "See, Strawn? The lining of this trunk lid is loose, and he tugged at the stiff, cretonne-covered pastboard. A good hiding place for documents—and here they are!"

"If that's the great hidden hoard—" Strawn began, grinning cynically as Dundee straightened, two thin envelopes in his hand.
"It is—all the hoard that the poor old lady had to hide, I'm afraid," Dundee agreed solemnly. "The life insurance policy referred to in the diary. In spite of Mrs. Hogarth's prophecy, she did outlive her daughter, though she never suspected it."
"Let me see!" Strawn took the crackling green-and-white document. "You were right, boy. This policy for $2000 was taken out by Sarah Harkness Griffin, also known as Sally Graves, aged 27 years, and is made payable to Mrs. Emma Harkness, also known as Mrs. Emma Hogarth, Mother, so both our murdered women were living under assumed names, and Mrs. Hogarth was really Mrs. Harkness. I wonder why—"

"So that 'D.' could not find them, of course," Dundee answered impatiently. "But he was cleverer than they were—"

"Remember, Bonnie, there's still not a shred of evidence to connect the two murders, let alone any basis for the assumption that both were committed by the same person," Strawn reminded his subordinate stubbornly. "Stranger coincidences than this are common in every police department."

"Yeah?" Dundee grinned. "Well, let's have a look at this other envelope. By the way," he interrupted himself, his eyes shining with sudden joy. "That will the old lady left isn't just a scrap of paper any longer! Since Mrs. Hogarth—and I'm going to call her that till the end of the chapter, if you don't mind—died without having collected the $2000 for which her daughter's life was insured, it will automatically fall to her heiress—Norma Paige!"

"And that will be nice for Walter Styles," Strawn grinned. "I believe he figured it would require just $2000 to save his little shop from bankruptcy."

"That's right," Dundee agreed moodily, as he slit the plain, unadorned envelope he had found along with the insurance policy. "Horrify, chief! Look what's here!" And he excitedly waved the official-looking document under Strawn's nose.

"What is it? Looks like a marriage certificate!"

"Exactly what it is!" Dundee exclaimed. "Obliging us with the name of the murderer! This priceless paper certifies that on June 2, 1922, in the town of Belton, Mo., one Sarah Jane Harkness and one Daniel Thomas Griffin were united in marriage. So D. was Daniel Thomas Griffin—a very bad penny!"

"I wish you wouldn't keep harping on that," Strawn complained, as he scanned the precious marriage certificate. "By George! Sally Graves, or Griffin, was murdered on her seventh wedding anniversary!"

"Another nice little coincidence?" Dundee taunted his chief goodhumoredly. "Listen, Strawn! I'm not leaping to conclusions nearly so wildly as you think I am. Sally Graves was murdered on June 2, and all her papers were burned by her murderer! Can't you agree with me that, in all likelihood, there were letters among them, those papers from her mother, Emma Hogarth—letters which carried the return address of the Rhodes House?"

"Perhaps," Strawn agreed grudgingly. "But not if Sally was carefully about destroying letters as her mother was. Mrs. Rhodes told you that Mrs. Hogarth burned each letter from Sally as soon as she had read it."

"Why should Sally have been so careful?" Dundee countered. "She had her own apartment, did not live in a boarding house, had no reason to fear a robbery, as had Mrs. Hogarth. If Sally Graves was the devoted daughter her mother's letters, containing $30 bills, indicate, its pretty likely that she kept her mother's letters to read over and over; it is possible that Mrs. Hogarth mentioned, in one of those letters, her pranks with will-making and hidden hoards, without making it clear to anyone but Sally that the hoard was mythical. She may even have deplored her own folly, remarking on her fears that she would be murdered for her money."

"Not likely she'd confess to her daughter that she was making such a fool of herself," Strawn objected.

"Well, what if his mother-in-law's address was the only thing that interested Daniel Griffin?" Dundee conceded. "I'll wager anything you like that he found the address, and memorized it before destroying any and every paper that could connect Sally Graves with Mrs. Emma Hogarth of Hamilton. But there was some reason why he killed Sally Graves or Griffin, still his legal wife. What that reason was I don't know. It could hardly have been robbery, since she was fully employed and had only a moderate salary as a head milliner. The natural supposition would be that he killed her when she refused to take him back as her husband, if it were not for the fact that he came on to Hamilton and killed her mother, too. That would be carrying revenge a little too far—"

"Well!" Strawn sighed. "I'm glad you admit that."

"Yes, I'm admitting that he thought Sally had what he very much wanted, that he killed her to get it, and that when he failed to find it in her possession, he believed her mother had it, and came to get it. The bad penny turned up."

"He wasn't in any hurry, was he?" Strawn gazed. "But probably he felt that a month's vacation between murders was no more than he was entitled to."

"You can't make me sore," Dundee assured him cheerfully. "I think Griffin would naturally have lain low for awhile after killing his wife. And murdering Mrs. Hogarth presented slightly greater difficulties, you must remember. Not so easy to gain access, unnoticed, to a boarding-house room as to a walk up apartment house in New York, where everyone minds his own business. This murder required careful planning; the other was immensely successful, although impromptu. Or it may have been carefully planned for weeks, to occur on that fateful wedding anniversary."

"I'm afraid Emil Sevier would resent the calm way you ignore him," Strawn grinned.

"But I'm not ignoring him," Dundee protested. "I think he was the keystone of Griffin's plans. Let's imagine that Griffin arrived in Hamilton on or before the date of Sevier's eviction from the boarding house, as an undesirable tenant, and as a possible menace to Mrs. Hogarth's life and money. The dining room is a hotbed of gossip. Probably every 'mealer' who ever dropped into the Rhodes House for dinner has been treated to a more or less complete account of Mrs. Hogarth's eccentricities, and her hidden hoard. And lately, of course, has heard all about her suspicion of Emil Sevier. I can imagine Daniel Griffin dropping in for a meal, his head already teeming with plans for murdering his mother-in-law, and being regaled with a full account of Sevier's eviction in disgrace. To him, Sevier must have seemed made to order as the perfect suspect—"

"And a most obliging one," Strawn interrupted sarcastically. "How could he have guessed that Sevier would so conveniently disappear after the murder?"

"That I don't know," Dundee conceded frankly. "But Griffin may have scraped an acquaintance with Sevier, learned from him something that we don't know—something that made Griffin sure that Sevier was going to be a very hard man to find after 1 o'clock on Saturday night. But there are at least two other reasons why it was necessary for Griffin to do the job not later than Saturday or Sunday night. As you already know, the screens to all windows, including a heavy, reinforced one for Mrs. Hogarth's window, were to be installed on Monday."

"And the other reason?" Strawn prompted, interrupted in spite of himself.

"That is fairly obvious," Dundee replied, but so pleasantly that his words did not carry a sting. "Granting, of course, that I am right, and that Griffin committed both murders. If he had very much of a conversation with Sally before he killed her, he probably learned that she was supporting her mother, sending a $50 bill in a registered letter, to arrive on the first of each month. Today is the first of July. Griffin knew that if he delayed his job longer than the first Mrs. Hogarth would not receive that regular first-of-the-month letter, and that very soon she might wire or write her daughter to learn the cause of the extremely unusual delay. If she had done so, she would inevitably have learned from the police, who are undoubtedly watching for mail addressed to Sally Graves, that her daughter had been murdered. And she would have put the police on the trail of Daniel Thomas Griffin!"

"I don't see how he could figure on the police not learning the connection between the two women," Strawn objected.

"I believe he thought he was fairly safe on that score, after rummaging through Mrs. Hogarth's things and finding not a scrap of paper bearing Sally Graves' or Sally Griffin's name."

Dundee answered. "Remember, he had already destroyed all evidence of that connection at the other end—documentary evidence, I mean. And probably Sally assured him that no living person besides her mother knew her real name. If she did not, the newspapers reporting the murder performed that service for him, by failing to unearth a single clue as to her past or to find a single intimate friend of the dead milliner. But—as usually happens—Griffin made one big mistake. He failed to notice that the lining of the trunk lid was loose at one corner."

"Well!" Strawn drew a deep breath, a mingling of incredulity and hope, as he reached for the telephone on his desk. "We'll see what your uncle, the police commissioner, has to say. This thing's too complicated for me. I'd rather take orders for a while." And he called a number.

Ten minutes later Police Commissioner O'Brien strode into the chief of detectives' office, clapped his nephew on the back affectionately, then settled down in the only comfortable chair to hear Strawn's story of the latest developments in the Hogarth case.

Dundee listened respectfully, but as Strawn conscientiously repeated all of the amazing and unsupported deductions which his newest assistant had made, the boy felt a genuine affection for the older detective growing rapidly in his susceptible young heart. None of Strawn's own incredulity crept into the tale, nor did he minimize the fact that it was Dundee who had unearthed most of the new facts and made all of the deductions from them.

When he had finished, O'Brien's blue eyes were twinkling. "Didn't I tell you to park your imagination before taking your new job, Bonnie?" he reproved his nephew fondly.

"Well, Strawn, I suppose we'll have to humor this lad. Get New York on the wire. Ask for Inspector Holloway. He's a friend of mine and he'll know all about the Sally Graves case."

"I'll talk."

While they were waiting for the long-distance call to be put through, Commissioner O'Brien took time off from his affectionate "riding" of his nephew to impress upon Lieutenant Strawn the fact that the search for Emil Sevier must be pursued relentlessly.

"I'm not letting up on Sevier," Strawn growled. "As far as I'm concerned, he's still the man we're looking for."

"The call came through then, Commissioner O'Brien being fortunate enough to have caught Inspector Holloway at headquarters."

After an exchange of cordial greetings, O'Brien rumbled into the mouthpiece. "Listen, Holloway, have you anything new on that Sally Graves murder?"

"Well, I've got some news for you, but I'll have to ask you to keep it quiet. Not a word in the newspapers until we give the word, or you may gum up a little party we've got on here. . . . Thanks, Holloway. I knew I could count on you."

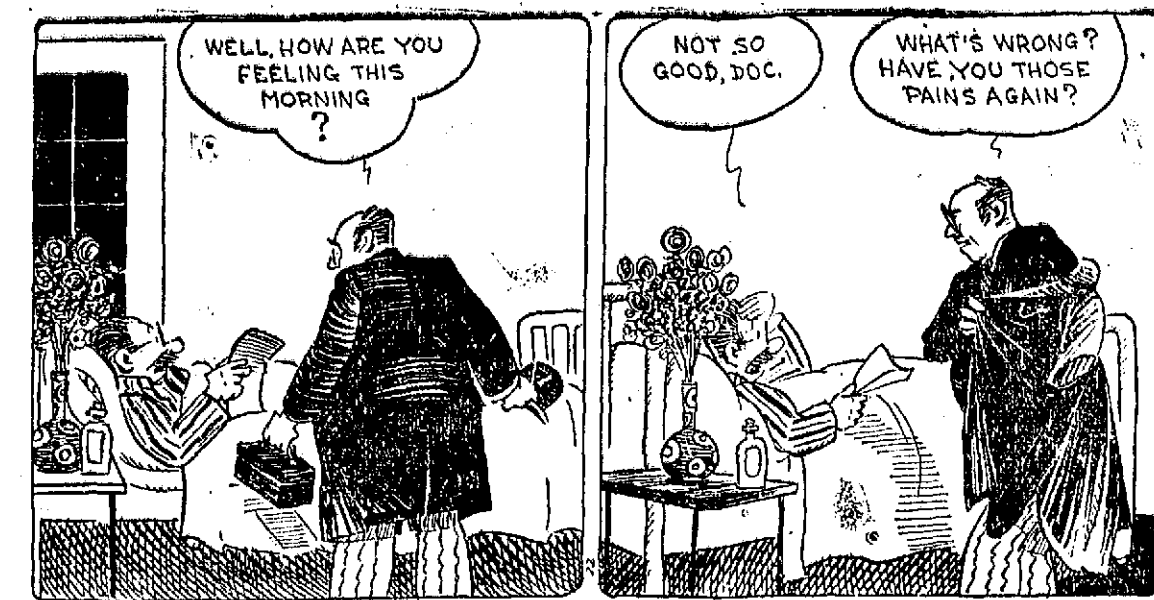

"Now, listen!"

With an astonishing economy of words O'Brien informed the New York detective of all that had been learned from the documents hidden under the trunk lid lining—that Sally Graves was really Mrs. Daniel Thomas Griffin, formerly of Belton, Mo., and that her mother, Mrs. Emma Harkness, known as Mrs. Emma Hogarth, had been murdered. He answered questions with the precision and rapidity of a machine gun spitting out bullets.

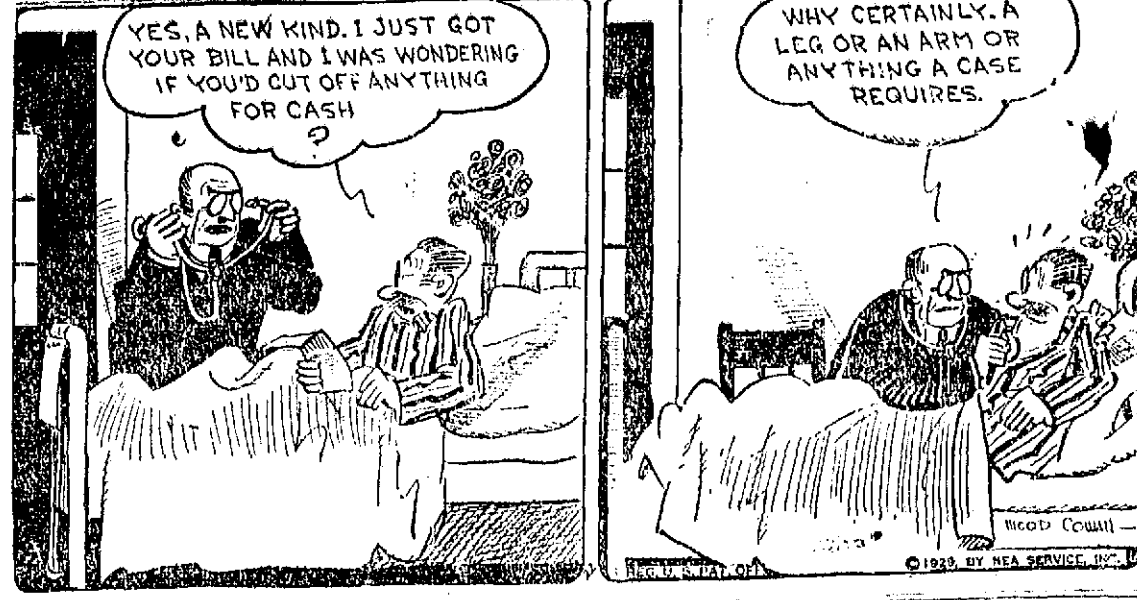

"When at last he hung up the receiver he moved his florid brow and beamed in his subordinate's. 'Guess I gave Holloway a jolt, all right. He says they haven't made the slightest headway on the Graves case, but can go ahead now on the tip I've given him. They're sending a man to Belton tonight, and I guess you'd better hop down and make it a pleasant little twosome. Strawn. First, though, I want you to get the Belton chief of police on the wire for me. It may not even be necessary for you to make

All-America Backs

Back in 1889 Walter Camp sat down with a roster of the Yale, Harvard and Princeton football teams and picked his first All-America eleven. Quite a few of the boys now are beginning to wish he had never done it.

This year the selection of an All-American backfield is going to be about as silly a business as an expert could attempt and the experts have pulled plenty of stunts this year that were funny enough, there's no denying that.

Over the country roams a whole battalion of brilliant backfield men. In profusion this year as never before. You can get off the train almost any Saturday at any old spot and a couple of All-America candidates will bob up to say howdy. Out of this vast array, an expert is supposed to pick four who are better than the others. Quick Watson, the need!

Birmingham
Try to choose by means of elimination is as difficult a process as any other. Thus, if you pick Lom, the California triple-threat back, in preference to Pug Parkinson, the Pitt plunger, what reasons are you going to advance for Lom's being better than Pug? To be sure Lom ran through a field for the touchdown that beat the Trojans, but down at Pitt whenever they need four yards for a first down they hand the leather to Parky and he tears it off.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Dr. John M. Thomas, president of Rutgers, can't wear a cone until Rutgers wins from Lafayette—He promised the students in 1926 that he'd put the stick away until Rutgers won that game—You couldn't get sure of Vanderbilt's coach, Dan McGinnis, if the Vandies beat your favorite team—because Dan says so many lovely things about the teams his boys play—Harry Stuhldreher, former Horseman, calls his Villanova team this year his greatest—Ray Caldwell, the former Cleveland pitcher, couldn't make the grade in the Central League (Class D) last spring—He went to Birmingham and helped the Class A team there to win a pennant—The older pitchers like it warm.

Al Marsters was injured, but it appears he can't be ruled off for that reason, even if you wish he could. Booth of Yale is there if any back ever was. Now you have two more places—in which to place Cagle, Lom Nagurski, Fleishacker, McF. v. r. r., Thomas, Master (of Pennsylvania), Uanss, Parkinson, Brill, Cordeiro, Mullins, Elder, Bonker, Welch, Sloan, Elson, Murrell, Wittmer, Phamer and 11 others. Just how are you going to do that?

Williamson Even Up
Back in 1911, those mortal grid enemies, Ohio and Michigan, were battling 0 to 0. After 20 minutes of play, Sam Williamson, Ohio back, was taken out of the game with his right leg twisted out of shape. Deprived of the noble chance every Ohio player cherishes—to help beat Michigan—Williamson turned in rage and howled at the crowd in the old Ann Arbor stadium.

"I'll be back some day!" This year Mr. Williamson is coach of the Ohio State team, and the other day he did go back. The score was Ohio 7, Michigan 0. Mr. Williamson apparently wasn't fooling.

A daily production of 60,000 meters of raw movie film will be the output of a new factory in Tiflis, Soviet Russia, to be completed in April.

A flying club is being organized by students at the University of Virginia. Transmission of "picturegrams" or telephotos, has been inaugurated between Sydney and Melbourne.

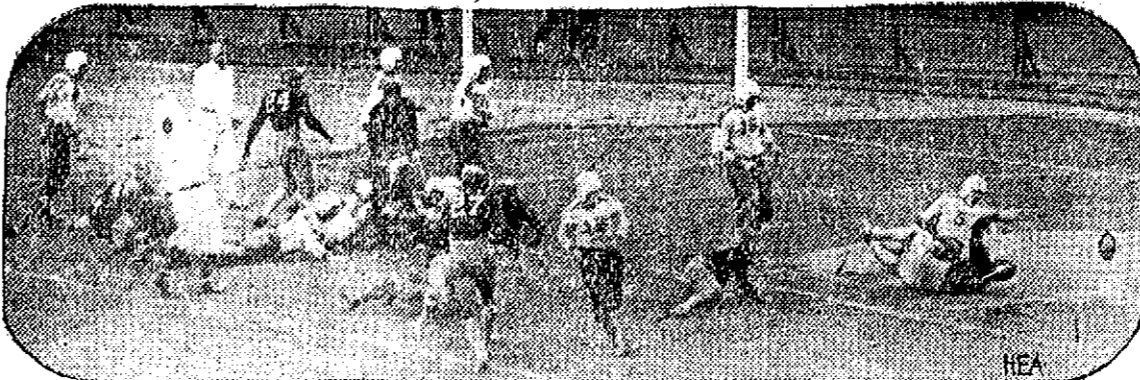

American motorists, it is estimated, will use 14,000,000 gallons of gasoline this year—a lake five miles wide and four deep.

He Dropped It, But It Was a Touchdown

A remarkable picture from the Georgia-New York University game, showing Beryl Follet, N. Y. U. halfback (No. 5) after he dropped the ball upon going over the line for a touchdown and being tackled by Halfback Chandler (No. 1) of Georgia. The play was ruled a touchdown, even though Follet dropped the ball. Fine interference was given by Halfback Sanford Roland (No. 15) and Guard George Sargisson (No. 16.)

the trip.
"The telephone company must be trying to make a record for service," the commissioner chuckled, when, after an astonishingly short interval, the Hamilton operator announced, "Ready with Belton."
"Hello chief!" he shouted into the mouthpiece. "Police Commissioner O'Brien of Hamilton. — speaking. I'd like any information you can give me on Daniel Thomas Griffin, a former resident of your town."
That's right, Griffin! G-r-i-f-f-i-n. What's that? . . . Good Lord! . . . May, 1924, you say? . . . Yes, yes, go on! I can hear you! . . . No trace of him since then? . . . Can you give me a description of him now? . . . No, don't bother to call back. I'm sending one of men down to Belton today. He'll explain when he gets there. . . . Thanks, old scout! Hope I can return the favor sometime. . . . Good bye!"

"Don't keep us in suspense," Strawn growled, as the police commissioner rocked back and forth in his chair, smiling significantly at his nephew.
"Well, Bonnie! Score one for imagination!" his uncle chuckled. "There's little doubt, had that Dan Griffin was a bad penny, but so far we have no proof that he turned up in Hamilton."
All right, Strawn! Keep your shirt on! Here's the dope: Dan Griffin, his wife, Sally, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Harlness, lived in Belton, Mo., until May, 1924. On May 10, 1924, Dan Griffin, who was a teller in the First National Bank of Belton, received the bank of $10,000 in undenominable bills of varying denominations—

"What!" Strawn's tilted chair legs crashed to the floor. "Mrs. Harlness hidden hoard."
Dundee grinned at his chief's excitement, but said nothing, though

BAD BREATH, DULL FEELING

Virginia Lady Tells How She Gets Rid of These Symptoms.

Rural Retreat, Va.—"Every so often," says Mrs. L. W. Hilton, of this place, "I am troubled with sick headache and biliousness, the result of constipation. My health gets bad, and I feel dull and lifeless. Such a spell follows constipation, and I have found it wise never to allow it to run on."
"At the first sign of such symptoms, I begin taking a course of Theodor's Black-Draught, and in a few days I am feeling well again."

"I have found that I always feel better after I have taken it. I am glad to recommend Black-Draught to others. We have used it in our family for six years or more."

Constipation damps up poisons in the bowels, where they are absorbed into the general system, causing many serious symptoms. At the first sign of constipation, take Theodor's Black-Draught.

This valuable remedy has been in use since 1835, with constantly increasing popularity, because of its real merit. Insist on the genuine, in a yellow package, marked "Theodor's" Price 25c.

And Bonnie, you're in charge of the case from this end until Strawn gets back. I'll rescind that order about parking your imagination, but— (To Be Continued)

Everybody in Hope and this trade territory seems to be saying a good word for this splendid property. Well, when a house is built, it requires lumber, brick, cement, lath, shingles, plaster, and whatever is needed to construct the home. Then, the carpenter, plumber, plasterer, painter, electrician, and others are furnished employment. When the house is completed, the hardware dealer, insurance man, furniture stores, and supply stores have more trade. The groceryman, druggist, milkman, all benefit with the building of a home. And the town, county and state get more revenue in the form of taxes.
